State climate program could fuel jump in gas prices

A nearly two decades-old program to slash climate-warming emissions from transportation could cause California gasoline prices to spike as much as 50 cents a gallon in the next two years.

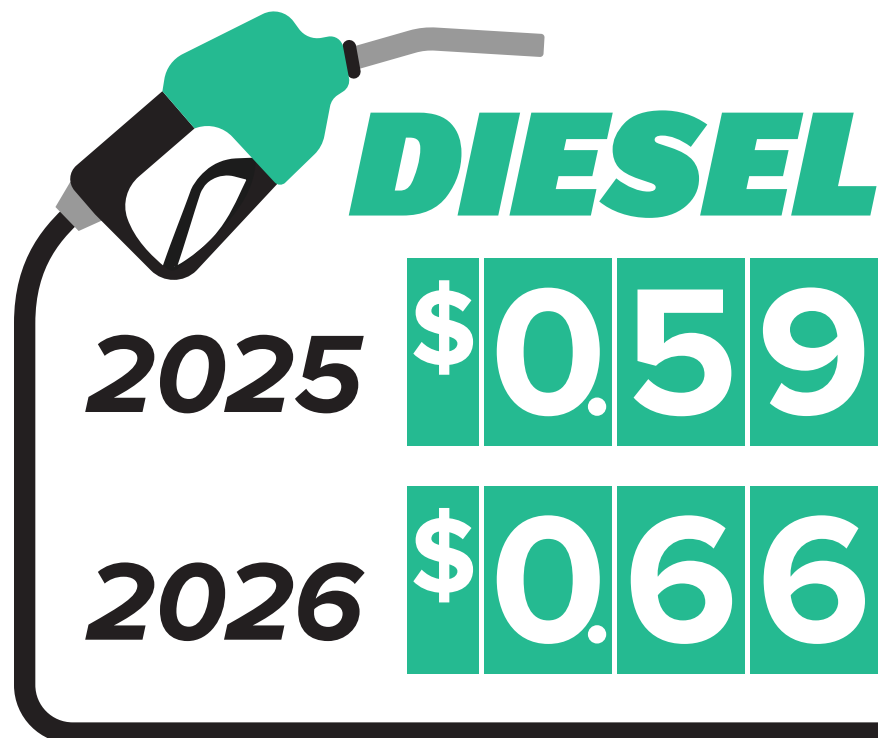

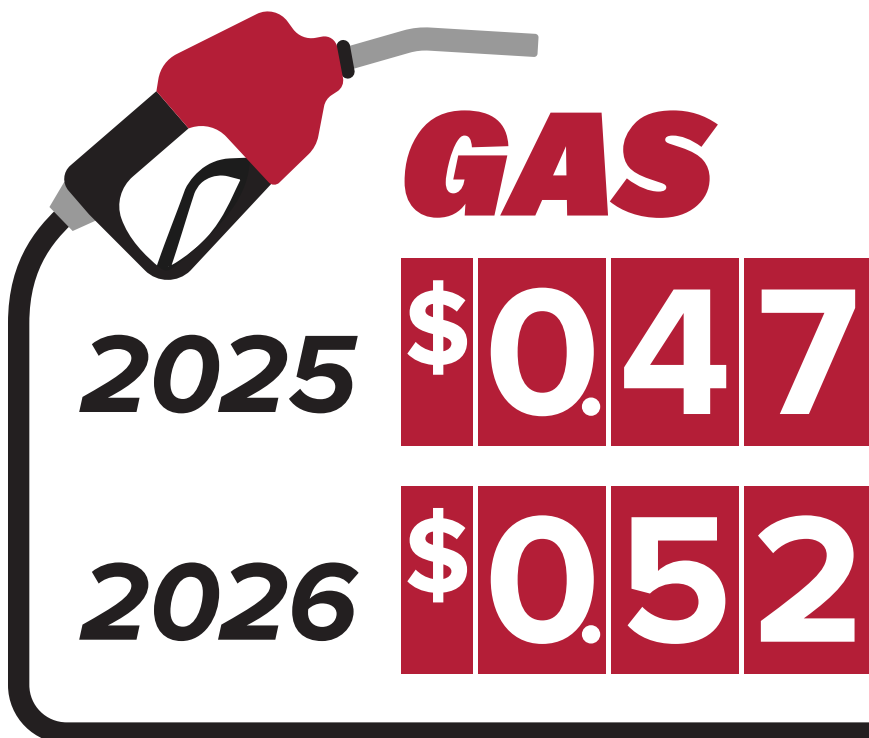

That's according to staff of the state's leading air quality regulator, who provided the estimate ahead of that agency's decision to strengthen the program created to discourage... alternatives.

The California Air Resources Board estimates that proposed changes to the Low Carbon Fuel Standard will increase gas prices next year and beyond.

PROJECTED PRICE INCREASES:

"I was shocked to see it," said Danny Cullenward, a climate economist and advisor to the state. "A 50-cent increase in the price of fuel is not a small thing."
